

New Crops - New Products

This is an exciting time of year for us – the Brazil crop has recently arrived and the Tanzania crop is packed and ready to ship. Here's the news...

Brazil

The Caixeta Family are well and still doing great work in their local community. Their crop was good and Athos is now working at sharing his knowledge of coffee and exporting with other small farms, building on the direct trade model he has with EA.

We have learnt lots about the farms in Brazil and their care for environment this year. Their sustainable thinking and habitat preservation for the area is remarkable and we will share more in our next newsletter.

Tanzania

Orera Village

The crop this year has been good and the quality is much higher as well. More farmers in the village have joined the community group and so we can get more great coffee direct from the village.

EA will again buy all the crop available and so this looks to be a great year for the families concerned.

CPU– the big news from Kilimanjaro is that following the work of the past two years to purchase land and raise funds the new Central Processing Unit (CPU) has been built.

Bente, manager at Machare Farm, who managed the whole project said:

"Finally we built the new building. It took a while, because the farmers did it all themselves. I found that very impressive, as it was all done in their spare time.

It also became bigger than planned because we had the funds. As from 2013/14 they will be able to use it."

This is what it's all about – sustainable year-on-year growth and investment, working with smallholders to transform lives.

NEW Planetary Design

More stock arrived of the award-winning range of coffee equipment from PD.
