

Easter House Hunt

Have you ever wondered about the history of your house? You may be amazed at what you can find out...

Each building pictured here has changed quite dramatically over the years.

Can you work out where each house is? They all lie within a stone's throw of the crossroads.

The riddles may give you some hints but there are valuable clues in roof lines too.

If you've been thinking about researching the history of your house, look out for more information coming soon. We will be running a 'How to Research the History of your House' training session to share our existing records and know-how as well as giving pointers to where to find more in-depth information.

Happy Easter!

The tree you see may be a clue,
my neighbour was a chemist shop.
I look very different today, it's true,
and I've gained a weathervane atop.

2.
A restaurant once for your delight,
A new building now stands upon this site,
Small in size, yet well visited, surely.
You once would come here if feeling poorly.

3.

Built by a blacksmith, his mansion grand,
I later became a grocer's shop.
For clues to where in the village I stand,
try looking at my very top.

4.

In a bid to modernise,
The Georgians hid ancient beams from our eyes.
Old in years, I could tell a story –
my framework's been restored to glory.

5.

The four steps now lead to a bricked in door and what lies to the right is no more.
To find me, if you're still unsure, look at where the roads meet four.
