

Every Picture Tells a Story

We have been married over thirty years.

We both had a bit of experience in the marriage field before and with 5 kids between us we set out on another adventure! We thought there might be a few challenges ahead but 'Never mind' said I 'As long as Somebunny loves you it'll be fine'.

So little Somebunny came along for the ride too and he has knocked around our house ever since. 13 grandchildren, one great grandchild and a few other friends along the way and he has survived with his ears intact. He's been a comforter for babies, a punchbag for some and just the right size to play catch with. He's been forgotten in corners, sunbathed on the window sill (his sweater used to be bright orange!) but he always gets dusted off and hugged and talked about with great affection. He's always been around and a reminder that we have survived (and are still surviving!!) the highs and lows of family life.

For our wedding anniversary this year our daughter made this picture with a card that says

'you're no bunny until some bunny loves you.'

30 years or so on Somebunny still has an impact.

Memories are precious and we've collected a few over the years. There's a lot of us and we all have our own lives to live and lead. Somebunny is a symbol that says we have worked and grown as a family and as long as Somebunny loves you all will be fine.

Gifts don't always have to be expensive – it's the thoughts behind them that are important and the smallest of keepsakes can be the most precious.

Our Somebunny picture has pride of place.
