There are more opportunities for people who are blind or partially sighted to play tennis than ever before. And we're delighted to say, more and more people are taking it up.

The visually impaired (VI) version of the game is played on a smaller court than usual, with a lower net. We also use an audible ball so you can hear it bounce. Depending on your sight, you're allowed up to three bounces before returning.

The sessions are designed to be fun and active and are available for all abilities.
