

Under the Mango Tree (UTMT) supports a rural community school at Kambe Timboni, 30 miles North of Mombasa. Fund raising for a new toilet block is a 2019 priority for UTMT as currently the toilets available for women and older girls are not fit for purpose.

The toilets are unhygienic, unpleasant and particularly ill-equipped to meet the needs of older girls which leads to lost school days and does not encourage girls to stay on in education. There is an abundance of evidence and international reports showing that encouraging girls in remote rural areas to stay on in school benefits the health and well-being of the whole community, not just the individual.

The expected cost is about £10,500 for provision of what will be really high-quality toilets – in comparison to those generally available in this rural area of eastern Kenya.
