Helen Sill

Helen is a Hampshire based artist originally from the North East of England. She combines her passion for drawing and stitch with a compulsion to never throw anything away. Recycling is integral to her work.

As well as an interest in drawing and creating machine and hand embroidered images she is fascinated by stitch in general and the emotion and energy produced when people come together to do so. Her work is about the world as she sees it. The female experience and questions of identity are a strong theme throughout.

Last year Helen was selected to be part of the Knitting and Stitching Show's Graduate Showcase and is currently the Embroiderer's Guild Education Scholar. She is also studying for a Fine Art Degree at Chichester University and gives talks and workshops connected to her work.
