Ruth Brown

Ruth is a textile artist, tutor and author based in the lovely East Riding of Yorkshire. She works with an eclectic mix of techniques from digital imagery and cyanotyping (blueprinting) to screen printing, paper lamination, discharge and dyeing to produce her richly patterned and textured surfaces and images of abstracted natural forms.

She enjoys the magnification of everyday things to reveal extraordinary details.

Ruth is a regular exhibitor and tutor at Knitting & Stitching Shows, the Quilt Festival, and Quilt shows throughout the country. She also teaches a range of courses at her studio, Stone Creek Barn, and at other venues throughout the country.

Her online course, 'Photoshop Elements for Textiles' has proved very popular with students far and wide.

Cyanotyping is a photographic technique from 1841 for producing beautiful, detailed white images on a Prussian blue background
